Frontline Supervision is Key to Talent Retention

Most business segments are seeing a talent shortage develop over the next 4-5 years due to people retiring and a diminishing pool of talented people available for hiring. In the U.S., the Department of Labor is projecting a talent shortage of 500,000 people in aerospace alone. Couple this with a Gallup survey of employee engagement that shows 19% of the American workforce is actively disengaged. They cannot respond favorably to statements such as

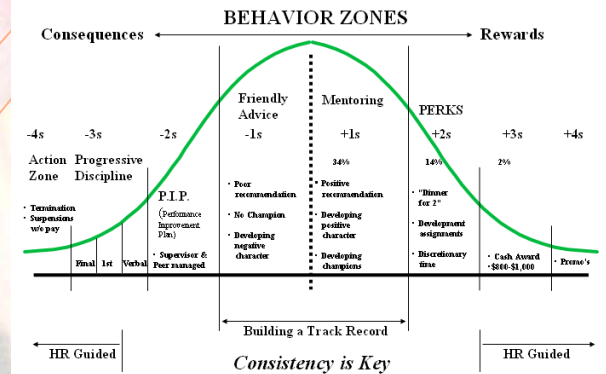

- * I know what I need to do and have the tools and training to do it
- * My supervisor gives me the direction and feedback I need
- * I have good working conditions and adequate compensation
- * I'm on a good team and someone says “thank you” once in awhile

Is this sufficient for the future? "Foundations in Supervising People" is designed to create a workplace where people are actively engaged under the guidance of a well trained supervisor.

Base-lining Performance Expectations

The effective/good boss understands the company's goals and makes them happen. With integrity, they guide, involve, orchestrate and engage a group of people to deliver goods and services efficiently and effectively while having genuine concern for their people.

As the boss, one of the most significant challenges is administering a baseline of expected performance while at the same time creating an environment where people choose to give their discretionary effort. Experience shows that performance conversations appear arbitrary and targeted when expectations and standards are absent or presented after the fact. What you “allow” quickly becomes the standard of acceptable performance, difficult to improve with the passage of time.

Your Workshop Leader

With over 35 years experience and numerous international applications of the principles in Fortune 500 companies, your workshop leader and practitioner Alden B. Davis guides you to become a great supervisor. Alden has worked with over 1,000 frontline supervisors around the world sharing lessons learned from working at United Technologies Corporation and FMC Corp. His entertaining and interactive style creates a learning environment where people are ready to excel. As one participant said, “I can honestly state that this course held my full attention from the minute it started until the minute it ended. This is a direct reflection on the instructor. He did a fantastic job.”

BE THE BOSS... Base-lining your Behaviors

Effective/Good boss: Understands the company's goals and makes them happen; someone with integrity who guides/orchestrates/involves/engages a group to deliver goods and services efficiently and effectively while having genuine concern for their people.
